2 teen girls, 16, charged with kidnap, battery of 3rd teen

Courier staff report

Two 16-year-old females, one a resident of Madison and the other a resident of Hanover, face four felony charges — including kidnapping, confinement and battery — in a June 19 case involving another female teen.

Because of the cases against them, both of the accused were charged in Jefferson County Circuit Court hearings as adults, which makes their identities public.

The young woman who was beaten is also a juvenile and her identification was withheld by law enforcement.

Elani Hines of Madison is charged with kidnapping; criminal confinement, and aiding, inducing, or causing criminal confinement, all Level 3 felonies, and with battery resulting in serious bodily injury, a Level 5 felony.

Hailey P. Bartley of Hanover is charged with kidnapping and two counts of criminal confinement, all Level 3 felonies, and with battery resulting in serious bodily injury, a Level 5 felony.

Both are being held in a detention facility in Johnson County, Indiana.

Jefferson County Sheriff's Deputy Charles Miller said in a report on the case that he was sent at about 5 a.m. June 19 to a Madison address after a woman at the address advised 911 dispatchers that her daughter had been physically assaulted.

Miller's report said that he found a young woman at that address in a "frantic state...with significant swelling to her head and face ... Most noticeable was the right side of (her) face and head, which was heavily bruised and swelled."

He also noted "bruising to the tops of her hands, (her) hair appeared freshly trimmed. She had patches of hair missing and her hair was very unevenly cut."

The young woman told Miller that she had been attacked by two other young women while spending the night with a friend at another friend's house on Madison's hilltop. She told Miller that there had been a discussion before she went to bed about whether she had touched one of her friends at the house in a manner that made the friend uncomfortable. Miller's report said the young woman said she considered the touching issue "no big deal."

She told Miller that as she was laying down to go to bed, two young women entered the room she was in. Miller's report said she recognized one of the two as Hines and that she did not know the other.

Miller's report said the young woman said Hines and the young woman with Hines told her she had 10 seconds to leave with them or she was going to "get hurt very badly." Miller's report said the young woman told him she left against her will.

The young woman told Miller she recognized the place she was taken as Hines' residence because she had been there before. Once inside, the young woman told Miller, she was "repeatedly punched, kicked, and slapped" and the "main focus seemed to be striking her head and face."

State honors for Tony Dattilo

Special to the Courier

Nearly three months after the 90th anniversary of the beginning of Anthony J. Dattilo Jr.'s work in the Madison area, Gov. Eric Holcomb's office awarded his son for following in his father's steps.

Anthony "Tony" John Dattilo Sr. received The Circle of Corydon award Tuesday morning in front of his father's storefront at 211 West Main Street from Rep. Randy Frye, who represents District 67 in the Indiana House.

"It's a perfect day to be in this gorgeous town of Madison," Frye said as he stood next to Tony Dattilo and his family and opened the large folder holding the award. "You have a lot of people that love you."

The award, signed by Holcomb and Frye, read: "Anthony J. Dattilo...who has demonstrated in life and in service to the people of the state of Indiana, the qualities exemplified by our state's greatest citizens; henceforth, and having been deemed worthy of such recognition...is hereby declared to be a distinguished member of the Circle of Corydon."

The Circle of Corydon Award honors exemplary citizens of the state. Holcomb created the award to honor Hoosiers. This is the only award bestowed and signed jointly by both the executive and legislative branches of government. The award is named after Corydon, which was the first state capital and the site where Indiana's founders and early leaders drafted the state's first constitution. Only members of the Indiana General Assembly may nominate individuals for this recognition.

"We've been here awhile, but we are very fortunate," Tony Dattilo said during the small ceremony outside his produce shop. "We've been very fortunate to have such a good family and the people around, the people we've had with us have been extremely good with the whole situation. Very fortunate. Very fortunate... The people make a real difference."

The Anthony Dattilo Fruit Company — and the Dattilo family — traces its roots to the family's involvement in the fruit trade in the Louisville area shortly after emigrating to the United States from Sicily around the 1880s.

The family made the move to the Madison area about 1929, when the Great Depression hit and the college scholarship of Anthony Joseph Dattilo Jr., Tony's father, was discontinued. He went to work immediately for the Dasta Fruit Company in town, owned by his uncle who had recently suffered a stroke.

The Civilian Conservation Corps putting families to work in the region, building up Clifty Falls State Park and other areas, and the young Anthony Dattilo Jr. struck a deal, providing produce to the workers and establishing his own foothold in the regional market.

After many years of business, Anthony Datillo Jr. eventually led the area Chamber of Commerce, while also secretly helping numerous immigrant families settle in the area, coaching youth league baseball, raising a large Catholic family, and actively practicing his faith by attending Mass each morning with his sons at St. Mary's Catholic Church — now, Prince of Peace on Second Street — and acting as chairman of a committee in the 1950s that sought to establish a Catholic school campus on Madison's hilltop.

Today, his son, Tony Dattilo Sr., follows in his footsteps.

In 2011, Prince of Peace Catholic Schools awarded Tony and his father, posthumously, the Golden Shamrock Award by Prince of Peace Catholic Schools for their remarkable contributions to the church and its schools.

In 2018, the Madison area Chamber of Commerce awarded Tony the Business Person of the Year Award for his entrepreneurial spirit, dedication to his family's business, and his community support.

When asked what Tony's father and mother would think of this new award, he paused. "He would be astounded, he would be astounded — really. (And, she would be) probably the same."

Airport receives $1 million grant for fencing

By MARK CAMPBELL
Courier staff writer

Madison Municipal Airport has been earmarked to receive more than $1 million in Federal Aviation Administration funding to construct fencing around its property on Madison's hilltop.

The project is based on a need identified by a wildlife assessment a few years ago that determined the airport and its runways were vulnerable to deer, coyotes, turkeys and other wild animals, creating a potential hazard to pilots and passengers using the facility.

The grant was among $3 million in Airport Improvement Program funding announced by U.S. Department of Transportation Secretary Elaine L. Chao for airports in Indiana. Chao announced $495 million in projects across the United States as part of a second allotment of an overall $3.18 billion in funding.

Madison's allocation for $1,093,082 was the largest amount awarded in Indiana. Knox/Starke County Airport will get $600,000 for a runway extension and Goshen Municipal Airport will receive $540,000 to rehabilitate a runway and taxiway. Other smaller amounts will go to airports in Auburn, Indianapolis, Muncie, Peru, Salem and Wabash.

Madison Airport Manager Brent Spry said although the grant has been announced, the

Purdue climate expert gives forecast on area's future

By PEGGY VLEREBOME
Special to the Courier

Some of the realities of climate change were brought home to a Madison audience Tuesday. The dirt in the yards and fields might already be changing. The days might be numbered for the apple trees. If jumping worms — an invasive species — spread this far, the trees in the forests will be in peril. Warmer low temperatures at night will doom corn crops, whose yields have been dropping for a decade.

The impacts were voiced not by a seer, but by a scientist, Hans Schmitz, the Purdue Extension agent in Posey County. He is a member of multi-state research groups studying climate change. His undergraduate and graduate degrees focused on agricultural meteorology.

Schmitz is a climate change educator who is visiting counties to talk about the Indiana Climate Change Impacts Assessment that the Purdue Climate Change Research Center began releasing in parts last year.

So far, detailed reports about climate, health, forest ecosystems, urban green space, agriculture, aquatic ecosystems, tourism and recreation, and energy have been posted online at ag.purdue.edu/indianaclimate

Reports about water, infrastructure, and the assessment summary remain to be posted. Reports are posted about every three months.

Schmitz was brought to Madison by the Jefferson and Switzerland County Master Gardeners. About three dozen people attended his presentation at the Jefferson County Public Library Madison branch.

Among the expected impacts of climate change in southeastern Indiana based on historical records and the computer model used in the Purdue studies, he said, are:

- From 1915 to 2013, there was an average of 27 days a year when the temperature was above 90 degrees. By 2050, there will be 76 to 89 days with temperatures that high. The calculations, he said, did not take into account changes in land use or other factors that could affect the high temperatures.
- The hottest day of the year in the past was 87, but in the 2080s, it could be as high as 106 to 112 degrees.
- There was snow on the ground an average of 53 days in the past, but could decrease to 30 to 34.
- By 2050, 5 percent to 6 percent more water is expected to flow into rivers.

In southeastern Indiana, the minimum temperatures in the summer are increasing and have gone up about 2 degrees. "This plays a major role in growing things, in plant stress."

"When we have a lot of 70-degree nights, corn doesn't do very well," Schmitz said. Especially affected is corn's ability to pollinate when the overnight low temperature is 70 or higher, he said. Warm nights also cause soybean leaves to flip over and tomatoes to "stop trying to produce fruit," he said.

There is a trend in southeastern Indiana for 10 more inches of precipitation a year than fell on average from 1915 to 2010, he said. "That's a lot. There is more precipitation and it's falling more intensely." A researcher in Iowa established that 1.25 inches of rain in 24 hours is enough to saturate the soil, he said.

From climate research, scientists expect a longer growing season that starts earlier and ends later, he said. Based on data through 2010, the first frost in Jeffer-

Bill relaxing concealed carry law taking effect Thursday

By BRUCE SCHREINER
Associated Press

FRANKFORT, Kentucky — As a gun-rights supporter, Michael Paul Wolfgar Lewis sided with Kentucky lawmakers when they relaxed gun laws to let people carry a concealed firearm without a permit or training.

But as the owner of a firearms training business in suburban Louisville, Lewis said the new Kentucky law that takes effect Thursday could send him elsewhere.

"Rights are rights," he said in a recent phone interview. "It's somebody's right to carry a gun."

Lewis said he expects the law to "completely cripple" his business — which offers firearms safety classes as well as produces and sells gun holsters. He's looking to set up a business in Florida but hasn't decided whether to keep open his Louisville-area operation. In Florida, those wishing to carry concealed weapons must obtain a permit, complete a firearms training course and get a background check.

The gun-related measure, backed by the National Rifle Association, is part of a large stack of laws passed by Kentucky's Republican-led legislature this year that will take effect Thursday.

Kentuckians able to lawfully possess a firearm will soon be able to conceal their weapons without a license or safety training. The law, which applies to people at least 21 years old, doesn't change where and when people can possess concealed weapons.

As it advanced through the legislature, the measure drew opposition from some law enforcement groups as well as the Kentucky chapter of Moms Demand Action for Gun Sense in America, a nationwide organization working to curb gun violence.

The law's supporters said Kentuckians already could carry weapons openly without training. But before the new law, if they carried a gun under a coat, they needed a permit.

Lewis' business had grown steadily and had been training about 1,000 people on firearms safety each year, but the number of people signing up for classes started dropping once the new law surfaced, he said.

Gun owners can still sign up for safety classes voluntarily. Lewis sees it as a way for gun owners to show personal responsibility and promote safety for themselves and others. But he expects sign-ups for safety classes to keep plummeting once the law takes effect.

That has him looking for a place to start over.

"It's a business move for me, even though I agree with Kentucky's bill and I think the legislators did really good with it," he said. "I've still got to feed my family."

Other new laws taking effect in Kentucky will:

• Give pregnant women the right to request "modest" accommodations on the job, such as more frequent breaks or lighter duties.

• Make it easier for some people convicted of nonviolent felonies to erase their records. It lowers a required fee and expands the number of felonies eligible for expungement.

• Require public elementary and secondary schools, beginning in the 2019-2020 school year, to display "In God We Trust" in a prominent location, which could include school entryways, cafeterias or common areas where students are likely to see the words.

Girl Scout, 11, killed by falling tree at Perry County camp

Indiana

CANNELTON — An 11-year-old Girl Scout was fatally injured when a tree suddenly fell on her and three others as they hiked along a gravel road at a Perry County campground, authorities said. It was raining when deputies arrived at Camp Koch about 11:30 a.m. Monday but there had been no severe weather or lightning reported in the vicinity at the time, Perry County Sheriff Alan Malone said. The sheriff wasn't certain why the about 40-foot-tall tree toppled, but said the ground was saturated from frequent rainfall over the past couple of weeks. Officials said Isabelle Meyer, 11, of Jasper sustained fatal head and abdominal injuries when she was hit by the tree. Malone said two women, ages 50 and 55, sustained serious injuries but were hospitalized in stable condition Tuesday. A 10-year-old girl was treated for a hand injury. A nurse and Girl Scout staffers were assisting the four who were struck by the tree when emergency workers arrived at the camp along the Ohio River about 60 miles southwest of Louisville, Malone said. Girl Scouts of Southwest Indiana released a statement Monday night, saying the camp would be closed during the investigation.

Boy rescued after fall from national forest cliff

ENGLISH — Authorities said they rescued a teenager who survived falling 50 to 60 feet from a cliff at Hoosier National Forest. The Indiana Department of Natural Resources said two Conservation Officers responded to a report of a missing juvenile Monday night and learned that the boy had left on an ATV, possibly to explore caves. A search team set out early Tuesday looking for the boy near Messmore Cliffs and found him with head, lower back and leg injuries. He was flown to University of Louisville Hospital for treatment. Maj. Tim Beaver of DNR Law Enforcement said in a statement that the officers' knowledge of the area "played a huge role in locating, securing and transporting this juvenile to safety."

New exhibits planned at bird-watching site

LINTON — Designs are being drawn up for new visitors center exhibits about the wildlife habitats of a popular southwestern Indiana bird-watching site. Organizations and foundations have given $60,000 toward the project at the Goose Pond Fish & Wildlife Area near the Greene County city of Linton. That includes $45,000 from the Friends of Goose Pond. The visitors center, opened in 2016, looks over the preserve's main pool areas. The new exhibits are expected to highlight the area's history, restoration work done there and describe its wildlife. Sandhill cranes, white American pelicans and endangered whooping cranes are among the some 260 bird species that have been documented at Goose Pond.

University president steeping down Aug. 15

UPLAND — Taylor University announced this week that its president, Paul Lowell Haines, will step down August 15. Taylor Trustees Chair Paige Cunningham said Haines' resignation was neither solicited nor encouraged by the Board of Trustees. Cunningham said Haines continues to enjoy strong support from the board. Haines, a 1975 alumnus of the Christian liberal arts university in Upland, has been president for three years. Haines returned to Taylor after a long career as a higher education lawyer and spent 15 years as a Taylor trustee. He also is a former vice president for student development at Taylor.

State police start work on new aviation base

GREENWOOD — Construction is starting on a new Indiana State Police aviation base at the Indy South Greenwood Airport. A ground-breaking ceremony was Monday for the estimated $2.5 million project that will include a new hangar for police helicopters and planes and office space that the state police will lease for the aviation unit. The unit has been based at the Indianapolis Regional Airport near Mount Comfort, just east of Indianapolis, since 2014. State police officials said they chose the Greenwood site because of its central location for the state and its proximity to Interstate 65.

60 birds rescued from alleged cockfighting

SPENCER — Officials said they've rescued 60 roosters, hens and chicks from at Owen County home that were apparently being raised as part of a cockfighting operation. The investigation began after anonymous tips and the Owen County sheriff's office searched the home last week, finding birds that had physical features consistent with cockfighting. Investigators also reportedly found methamphetamine and drug paraphernalia. A man and a woman who live at the home were arrested and they're expected to face charges. The Humane Society of Owen County said Tuesday that four dead chickens also were found. The seized birds are being cared for until a court determines what should happen to them.

Man in road rage attack won't get more jail time

FORT WAYNE — A man who was convicted of battery for beating another man who subsequently died of a heart attack during an apparent road rage attack won't get more time in custody. Twenty-eight-year-old Brandon Cook was sentenced Tuesday to a year behind bars for the misdemeanor, but he was given credit for more than eight months already spent in jail. His public defender says inmates in such misdemeanor cases typically serve half of their time, so he's due to be released. Cook was charged in the August death of 60-year-old Orlando Fernandez. A jury acquitted Cook of involuntary manslaughter, a felony. The men had an altercation along U.S. 30 in Fort Wayne. An autopsy determined Fernandez died of a heart attack triggered by the stress of the altercation.

Bulleit distillery opens visitor center

SHELBYVILLE — Bulleit Distilling Co. has opened a visitor center at its Shelbyville distillery in Kentucky. The production facility is joining the growing bourbon tourism business in the state, which produces about 95 pecent of the world's bourbon. The distillery is just outside Shelbyville, about 30 miles from Kentucky two largest cities, Louisville and Lexington. The Visitor Experience includes guided tours, a cocktail bar and an opportunity for visitors 21 years or older to design a customized Bulleit label to apply to their own bottles. Parent company Diageo said it has invested about $150 million in the distillery and visitors' center, generating more than 75 jobs in the past five years.

Businesses awarded grant to fight epidemic

LEXINGTON — The Kentucky Chamber Workforce Center has been awarded about $700,000 in grant money to identify how businesses can prevent opioid addiction in the workplace and help employees recover. The center's director, Beth Davisson, who announced the Opioid Response Program for Businesses, said the Office of Drug Control Policy gifted $350,000 and private donors matched. The program's goal is to work with businesses to provide free audits of human resources policies and procedures related to addiction and recovery. Davisson said businesses put funds and policies toward helping employees recover from diseases such as cancer or diabetes, but aren't equipped to help workers through addiction recovery. The grant will also fund a study on how the opioid epidemic is affecting the workforce.

Pastor accused of taking photos resigns

LOUISVILLE — The pastor of a Catholic church in Louisville has resigned after accusations he took inappropriate pictures of students during the parish's field day. Church leaders announced the resignation from the Rev. Jeff Gatlin in a June 17 email to parishioners of St. Francis of Assisi in Louisville. Gatlin was accused of "inappropriate picture taking" during the field day May 13. In an email to parents May 20, Gatlin wrote he didn't believe he had done anything wrong. Further details have not been released regarding the photos. Parish leaders sent an email to parishioners May 31 saying Gatlin was getting treatment for chemical dependency and depression. Louisville Archbishop Joseph Kurtz said Child Protective Services reviewed what happened on field day. They found that no criminal activity took place.

Rural Letter Carriers museum has new home in Hope

By MARK WEBBER
The Republic, Columbus

HOPE — The Indiana Rural Letter Carriers Association Museum has a new, permanent home in the town of Hope after a four-year absence.

The building at 638 Main St. has been acquired to serve as the new home of the Letter Carriers museum, according to an announcement from long-time Yellow Trail Museum leader Barb Johnson.

Located immediately south of the Yellow Trail, the building formerly served as a studio for Michael Arford, a highly-decorated Indiana State Police master trooper who became a professional photographer after retiring from law enforcement in 1993. Arford died in September 2017 at the age of 78.

The Yellow Trail Museum has become the major caretaker for most of the artifacts from the Indiana Rural Letter Carriers Association Museum. Here are just a few of the item on display in Hope. (Photo by Mark Webber/The Republic-Columbus)

For several years, the Letter Carriers museum was housed in a tiny, brown, wood-frame building on the northwest side of the town square to commemorate that Hope has the the longest continuous rural mail delivery service in the state, which dates to October 1896.

It was believed for a time that Hope had the longest continuous service in the entire country, but a number of historians believe that honor goes to Charles Town, West Virginia, which was the hometown of the U.S. Postmaster General in 1896.

But the municipally-owned building had problems. For example, there was no climate control, which made the building prone to insect infestation. In addition, the sunlight that came through the large exhibit windows damaged a number of fragile exhibits.

Another factor was the annual Hope Heritage Days, which had grown so large that organizers said they needed the prime space on the northwest side of the square occupied by the museum.

As part of a $100,000 town square beautification project, the small structure was demolished in 2015 after a variety of different organizations, including the Hawcreek Heritage Arts Center, agreed to house some of the exhibits.

But in recent years, the Yellow Trail Museum has become the major caretaker for the artifacts, Johnson said.

While the Arford building was acquired by the Yellow Trail Museum for $42,500, "now comes the time when we have to beg for grants to see what help we can get for necessary changes and improvements," Johnson said.

Since the acquisition was just announced June 18, Johnson said it's too early to begin speculating on when the new museum will open.

"It will depend on how quickly money comes in, and how fast we can work," she said.

Many artifacts will remain in secure storage until building repairs and renovations are completed, Johnson said.

Some of the most valuable items trace their heritage to Hope. They include two enclosed mail delivery carriages that are believed to have been made by the Neligh Co. of Hope.

Other exhibits include Hope carrier E.J. Spaugh's cash and supply box, which he used from 1902 to 1934, as well as a tin foot warmer used by late 19th-century mail carrier Nella Drybread of Edinburgh.

Teachers organize pay protest at education training conference

By ERICA IRISH
Chalkbeat Indiana
chalkbeat.org

At least 60 teachers in bright red shirts confronted Indiana school administrators outside of a conference to demand higher pay and greater funding for the state's traditional public schools.

Though the educators standing outside the Indiana Education Employment Relations Board conference were largely muted — there were no cheers, shouts, or chants to be found — they were highly visible, making their presence known by flanking the entrance to Noblesville's Ivy Tech Community College and handing out fliers.

"I hope we can get the people of [IEERB] to realize that these decisions they're making, they're more than just words on paper or checks on boxes," said Brad Bennett, a teacher from Western School Corporation near Kokomo who mobilized teachers on Facebook for the protest. "It puts people's lives at stake."

The Indiana Education Employment Relations Board is a neutral state agency that researches school contract negotiations, led by a board appointed by the governor and legislative leadership. While it doesn't have direct control over salary negotiations, its staff monitors collective bargaining agreements around school salaries, wages, and benefits to ensure they comply with state law and provides mediation services if needed.

But in many ways, participants said the demonstration was less about the board and more about continuing public action targeted at state lawmakers that started during the legislative session in the spring, which included a rally in March that saw hundreds of teachers flock to the Statehouse.

"I grew up as a foster kid. One of the only things I really had was my school system," said Allistare Lute, a 33-year-old teacher from Decatur Township, while holding a red-and-white sign listing off numbers about Indiana's teacher pay rates and school funding. "If we're going to turn around and fund these private institutions that they call public…but not fund our public schools, we're taking away from our kids and our future."

Teachers at Tuesday's demonstration repeatedly pointed to a report by Forbes magazine that found Indiana teacher salaries saw the least change of any state between 2002 and 2017. They also criticized the state budget lawmakers finalized this year, pointing to an analysis circulated by state Democrats that shows the state allocates a 2 percent funding increase for traditional public schools while providing a 10 percent increase for public charter schools in each of the next two years.

But Republican policymakers touted the budget as a "tremendous success" for educators, highlighting provisions that increased teacher bonuses and a plan by Gov. Eric Holcomb to use $150 million of the state's reserves to pay down pension liabilities among schools. Holcomb argued the one-time payment would free up more dollars at the district level and keep decisions about teacher pay in the hands of local communities.

Still, the group also came armed with concerns about the new collective bargaining laws addressed at the conference. The event was open to all stakeholders, including teachers.

There are several new laws that will affect negotiations this year. Sarah Cudahy, executive director of the IEERB, explained each of them at the conference's opening session.

The teachers assembled for the walk-in said one concerning change is a new requirement that districts hold a public meeting before formal negotiations start on Sept. 15, and another public hearing at least 72 hours before an agreement is ratified. If the parties can't reach an agreement by Nov. 15, they enter an impasse period and face intervention from the state.

Teachers at the protest said current bargaining rules hamper their ability to sit at a table that's already hard to reach. Most are in the classroom once formal bargaining begins, which can limit how much time they can contribute to negotiations.

"They need to see the faces of the people they're working for, not just the administrators," Randall Studt, a teacher from West Lafayette, said about the board. "I want them to see red. I want them to realize we're watching everything they do."

Hoosiers too obese, smoke too much, Indiana Chamber says

By JOHN T. MARTIN
Evansville Courier & Press

EVANSVILLE — The generally poor health of Indiana residents is negatively impacting the state's competitiveness, Indiana Chamber officials said Tuesday during a stop in Evansville.

By many metrics, such as taxes and regulations, the state's business climate is strong, according to Chamber officials. But they said businesses are being hurt by healthcare costs.

Indiana's adult smoking rate is 21.8 percent, up from 20.6 percent in the previous two-year comparison. Among the 50 states, Indiana's ranking went from 38th-worst to 44th-worst.

Indiana's smoking rate is double the national average.

"It's going down in most other states," Indiana Chamber CEO Kevin Brinegar said. He also cited a "vaping crisis" among teenagers.

One in three Hoosier adults is obese. The exact same percentage exists in Southwest Indiana.

"This is important to Indiana's business climate and economy because it's estimated smokers cost Indiana employers $6.2 billion a year in higher healthcare costs, absenteeism and lost productivity," Brinegar said. "That's real money that's not going to end up in wages, benefits, training, plant equipment modernization."

Brinegar said he was in a presentation recently where auto executives from Michigan, who said that because of Indiana's high health care costs, "they have a mantra of 'anywhere but Indiana.' The difference in healthcare costs in Michigan vs. Indiana is enough to offset their profit margin on a single car."

Brinegar is conducting meetings across the state on Indiana Vision 2025, an outline of Chamber goals for the state's future. It was released in 2012, and the Chamber has since documented progress toward the goals.

The Chamber has advocated higher cigarette taxes and raising the legal age to smoke as two ways to lower the smoking rate. But the General Assembly hasn't budged.

Brinegar said many lawmakers are leery of supporting higher taxes, even though the Chamber has polling data supporting its positions. Making cigarettes more cost-prohibitive might dissuade younger people from starting smoking, he said.

Beyond the health data, Brinegar said Indiana's rate of completing education beyond high school also lags behind nationwide averages.

The state ranks around 37th and 38th in areas of associate's degrees, bachelor's degrees and industrial certifications. However, Indiana is showing some improvement.

"Some of it is our history of being an industrial and manufacturing state ... We fell behind in that regard and are working to catch up," Brinegar said. "It also is expensive, and the debt loads can be high. Parents and students are starting to question what my earning capacity is for this particular degree ... There are big changes going on within colleges and universities, particularly on the private side but also on the public side."

Another statewide priority must be spawning new entrepreneurs, Brinegar said, because "existing companies can keep growing jobs for only so long."

He also cited the ongoing problem of having far more available jobs than skilled workers to fill them. Brinegar said Indiana must continue to focus on job training and recruiting talent from other states.

Southwest Indiana Chamber CEO Tara Barney said data is helpful for elected officials and business leaders as they shape priorities and policies.

She said the Chamber's updated report, as well as the local Chamber's recent tour of Omaha, Nebraska, have provided much food for thought.

"Southwest Indiana is using the state Chamber's data and our trip to Omaha to connect the dots between those goals and metrics toward those goals, and how to best use scarce resources," Barney said. "When we track data, we actually start to get something done."

Turner drives Roostertail like McCormick drove Miss M

By CHARLIE ROHLFING

In other words, he's in it to win it. It's hard not to get caught up in Brent Turner's infectious can-do attitude and his throw-caution-to-the-wind style. He and festival co-director Matt Wells have taken their brand new music event from zero to 200 mph in just two short years.

"The whole idea came out of necessity," Brent said. "Regatta was drowning in red ink after several years of bad luck and bad weather. We had to generate extra revenue somehow. We tested the waters three years ago with just three bands on Saturday night and the response was excellent.

"So last year we named it Roostertail Music Festival and went all in," Brent continued. "The Regatta committee gave me a budget to work with, and I stretched that budget so thin you could see through it. We were going to succeed or go out in a blaze of fireworks!

"We made it an official ticketed music festival starting last year, separate from Regatta, but still affiliated. Our headliner last year was The Turnpike Troubadours, and we kind of struck gold with that choice. Their fan base is really energized and loyal. So we thought, how do we leverage those Turnpike fans for this year?

Brent Turner

"The Turnpike base really likes the band American Aquarium, so we booked those guys. And then when we announced Whiskey Myers as our headliner, the Turnpike online community just blew up. I think we've found our successful music niche. Pre-sale wristbands are actually moving faster than last year at this time.

"We have a big music committee that picks the bands, but we're all on the same page. We all like country music, but more what you might call alt-country or outlaw style. Not the mainstream pop commercial country. We also like rock, of course, and Americana roots stuff.

"Friday night is what I call our fun mix, if you like a little bit of everything. You'll hear '80s new wave, alt-rock, a hip-hop duo, and even some '90s throwback country. Saturday night we are bringing the hard rock early, and then go southern country. Oh, and our free Thursday kick-off show is even better, with more bands and a much deeper quality line-up.

"But not only have we upped the ante on our band line-up this year, but we've also thought a lot about the overall fan experience and how to make it enjoyable. Our goal is to create a total fun atmosphere. We're going to have Matthew Schermer walking around in a rooster costume posing for photos. We want it to be spontaneous and fun for everyone. Oh, and I have 400 beach balls on order!

"You know next year is the 70th anniversary of the Regatta. So we're working on something special. We already have six bands booked for 2020, and we're going to try for the biggest and best headliner ever. What was it the 1971 Miss Madison team used to say about risking it all to win? Go or blow! We're never going to play it safe."

HOT TIP OF THE WEEK:

On Friday the Troubadours of Divine Bliss will be at the Taproom. These two ladies used to play Thomas Family a lot back in the early days, so they have quite a local fan base. I'll be there for sure. On Saturday you should drop by Thomas Family Winery and catch guitar wizards Bill Lancton andJimmy Davis. Or if classical and mellow is more your style, the amazing guitarist Howard Le will be sharing his talent at Rembrandts Wine Bar Saturday evening.

Charlie Rohlfing is a stalwart of the RiverRoots Festival committee, a campfire guitar strummer, and a partner in The Red Bicycle Hall music venue. Look for his distinctive fedora bobbing above the crowd, anywhere live local music is happening. Find him out and about or at charlie@madisoncourier.com

She told Miller that Hines and Bartley tried to get her to hit them back and told her that if she did not fight back "it will be a lot worse." She said she was dragged into a bathroom where electric trimmers were used to shave part of her hair. She also told Miller that Bartley "held a knife" to her neck and told her that if she told anyone about the incident, she would have "people from Indianapolis kill" her. Miller's report said the young woman reported she was then kicked out of the residence and told to go home.

Miller's report said friends of the young woman who were at the house where she had been staying overnight said the young woman made her way back there after "a while" and they took the young woman to her mother's house.

Miller enlisted the help of Corporal Patrick Finnegan and Detective Yancy Denning, both of the sheriff's department, and Hanover Police Chief Josh Taylor to continue the investigation, obtain a positive identification of Bartley, and arrest both suspects.

The young woman who was beaten was taken for treatment and admitted to a hospital. Her condition is not known at this time.

Girl, 12, shot in head with pellet

Courier staff report

A 12-year-old Madison girl was shot in the head Monday at a playground in the Presidential Apartment Complex on Madison's hilltop.

According to Madison Police, the girl was in the area of the swing sets and basketball court in a playground just off Kennedy Drive when the incident took place. The girl and witnesses told police the gun, a C02 BB/pellet gun, was fired shortly before 7 p.m. by a 15-year-old male, striking the girl in the head. Madison Police Officers arrived at 6:50 p.m. to find the girl sitting on a sidewalk in the 2800 block of Kennedy Drive with blood running down her face. They told her to stay put until the King's Daughters' Hospital EMS arrived just minutes later. The girl told officers she was in pain and gave them the name of the male juvenile who allegedly shot her near the swing sets.

According to Madison Police Chief Jeremey Perkins, the girl was transported to King's Daughter's Hospital where she was treated and released. A doctor there said she should fully recover from her injury.

During an investigation by police, MPD Det. Kyle Cutshaw notified Patrolman Adam Guzman that he was possibly familiar with the suspect and had seen the boy earlier in the day with a BB gun at Wal-Mart, 567 Ivy Tech Drive.

Cutshaw interviewed the male suspect at the Madison Police Department and the boy admitted to shooting the girl but stated that the shot was an accident.

The investigation is ongoing and will be forward to the Jefferson County prosecutor's office for review.

son County can be expected between Oct. 21 and Oct. 25 instead of between Oct. 27 and Oct. 30 or Nov. 1 through Nov. 5, he said.

The last frost in spring can be expected between April 21 and April 25 instead of April 11 through April 15, he said.

One result is 50 more degree-days a year. A degree-day is a calculation that measures heat accumulation and is used to predict the development of plants and pests, including the predicted date of crop maturity.

Having a growing season 50 days longer will not be good, he said, because the extensions are in "clumps" at the beginning and end.

Schmitz said he does "not put a lot of stock" in plant hardiness zones because so many variables such as elevation and presence of a river can affect the best time to plant in a specific place. But those who study hardiness zones and changing climates expect that in a few decades, Jefferson County will have the hardiness zones that Tennessee has now.

There are several things individuals can do to have an impact, he said. And, people can track the weather daily and into the long periods such as 30 years, to note changes in their locales.

Schmitz said he studied the accuracy of the online weather forecasts in his area by keeping track of what the National Weather Service, the television networks in the area where he lived at the time, The Weather Channel and Weather Underground (which now is owned by The Weather Channel) predicted for the high and low temperatures. He compared their forecasts to the actual temperatures. The National Weather Service was the most accurate while The Weather Channel and Weather Underground were the least accurate, he said.

Schmitz said he noticed a correlation between snazzy websites and what he considered drab webites and their accuracy.

"Find an ugly website and trust that data," he said.

Other things people can do, he said, are:

• Join CoCoRaHs, the Community Collaborators Rain, Hail & Snow Network (cocorahs.org), made up of volunteer weather observers. He said no one in Jefferson County participates. The National Weather Service uses the information submitted by participants.

• Take their home off the grid by using solar and other alternatives that do not use coal, oil or natural gas. Fossil fuels are blamed for climate change as a result of producing greenhouse gases.

• Drive less.

• Talk to legislators about environmental policies "like the Paris Accord but with teeth."

• Have soil and plant tissues tested to watch for negative impacts from climate change.

• Watch for negative impacts. For example, he said, the jumping worm, also known as Asian worm or Japanese worm, has made its way into Indiana. It is identified mostly by the way it jumps and wiggles when it is touched, he said, adding that Jefferson County extension agent Lonnie Mason can make a positive identification if someone thinks they found one. Climate change is expected to open the way for invasive species like the jumping worm to spread. The worm feeds on dropped leaves. In a forest, the trees depend on the nutrients in the dropped leaves for their survival, he said.

Schmitz told the audience about another aspect of climate change — when an environmental program of the past ends up negatively affecting living things later on.

The Clean Air Act of 1990 set reductions of sulfur dioxide, a greenhouse gas that is the cause of acid rain. There followed great reductions in sulfur use. For example, power plants like Clifty Creek installed equipment to remove most of the sulfur dioxide to keep it out of its smokestacks.

Now, for the past five or six years soybeans have been suffering from sulfur deficiency, Schmitz said. Soybeans need sulfur to complete their lifecycle. For soybean farmers, this means the additional cost of buying sulfur for their crops, he said.

money could still be held up if other projects in the state are deemed more essential. That actually happened two years ago when the project was earlier approved. He also said the actual cost of the project could changed based on engineering specifications and the bid process and that any money the airport receives will have to be approved by Madison City Council since the airport, opened in 1964, is owned by the city.

"We were supposed to do this two years ago but the funding got pulled," Spry said. "We should know more in September when the FAA's budget year ends."

As proposed, the project would construct a 10-foot wildlife fence around the perimeter of the airport and install a new gate at the entrance. The fence would keep wild animals and people out and make the runways safer for planes using the airport.

"We don't have any fencing right now — just a tension wire — so it's a safety issue," said Spry, noting that he's seen herds of as many as 10 deer running through the property in the past. "We're not staffed at night and we have jets coming back in trying to land and take off."

Currently the airport controls wildlife encroachment by keeping an eye on security cameras located around the property and responding to chase them away when a threat is identified. The airport has also issued special permits through the Department of Natural Resources that allow select hunting to harvest deer and turkey year round to try to make the facility safer for pilots and passengers.

Meanwhile, Chao's latest announcement included 357 grants to 46 states and the Pacific Islands to fund infrastructure projects at 381 airports. The projects include runway reconstruction and rehabilitation, construction of firefighting facilities and maintenance of terminals, aprons and taxiways. The investment is targeted at making airports safer and better positioned for further economic growth and development within each airport's region.

The United States has 3,332 airports with 5,000 paved runways According to the FAA's most recent economic analysis, U.S. civil aviation accounts for $1.6 trillion in total economic activity and supports nearly 11 million jobs.

U.S., France ready to duel in World Cup quarterfinal

By ANNE M. PETERSON
AP Sports Writer

PARIS — It wasn't just the fans who were looking forward to a quarterfinal clash between France and the defending champion United States at the Women's World Cup. Megan Rapinoe clearly was, too.

"I hope it's huge and crazy. That's what it should be," Rapinoe said just after the match was set. "This is the best game, this is what everybody wanted. I think we wanted it, seems like they're up for it, you guys are of course are up for it, and all the fans."

While the players said the focus for the United States was always on one game at a time, Rapinoe voiced the underlying truth about the match in Paris on Friday: It was circled on everyone's World Cup calendar since December's draw.

"It's going to be totally awesome. This is what everybody wants. And these are the biggest games that you kind of dream about as a kid," Rapinoe said.

The United States advanced with a physically challenging win over Spain in the round of 16, while France scored in extra time to get past resilient Brazil.

The top-ranked U.S. team breezed through its group stage at the World Cup, pouncing on Thailand 13-0 before more balanced victories over Chile and rival Sweden. But Spain posed a challenge to the three-time champions, relentlessly targeting Alex Morgan and using brawn to counter the Americans' superior speed.

Rapinoe scored on a pair of penalty kicks for the 2-1 victory in Reims on Monday night, although the game-winner in the 75th minute was the result of what many thought was at best minimal contact between Spain's Virginia Torrecilla and Rose Lavelle. The foul was confirmed after video review.

Lavelle insisted afterward: "I didn't flop."

Players said the difficult match was crucial to the team's preparation going into the quarterfinal against the fourth-ranked French, the first time the U.S. has faced the host in a World Cup.

2019 H1 Season Kicks Off

Shane, Homestreet ready to reclaim the championship

They had no way of knowing it at the time, but the inaugural Southern Cup in Guntersville, Alabama last year proved to be a microcosm for the entire season for the Miss HomeStreet/Miss Madison Racing Team.

Two disqualifications on engine violations during the preliminary heats cost the team 800 crucial points and in the final, Jimmy Shane had victory snatched from him at the last moment as Andrew Tate roared back to nip him at the wire for the win.

Tate would go on to win five of the six races on the H1 Unlimited series and roll to his — and his team's first-ever national title — while Shane and the HomeStreet settled for second place. After winning four-straight titles and eight of the last 10, it was a finish that left a bad taste in their mouths.

"(Last year) was probably the most trying year that I have ever had as a driver," Shane said. "I think you definitely have to take the lessons learned from last year and insure that you don't recreate any of that and at some point, you have to wash it clean."

While Shane and the now U-6 Miss HomeStreet will not enter this weekend's second annual Southern Cup as the defending champion, they certainly will be the overwhelming favorite to claim victory on the wide and fast two-mile track on Lake Guntersville.

Tate's U-1 Jones Racing has opted to skip the race, seemingly leaving Shane as the man to beat. It is a position that Shane knows well and he is eager to get on the water.

"Coming into 2019, I feel like we have a fresh outlook. Focused and driven are the two words that come to mind," Shane said. "The overall goal is the national championship. We've won eight of the last 10 as a team. We know we have the people, the will and the drive to do it. That's what we have to do this season and what we are going to do. I'm excited to get back into the cockpit and show everyone that I still have it."

Facing off against Shane will be a field of drivers that are, for the most part, still seeking their first-ever win at the Unlimited level.

The lone exception to that is J. Michael Kelly, who returns to the sport as a full-time driver for the first time in two years. Kelly has eight career wins on the H1 circuit — second to Shane among active drivers — but will be navigating the Lake Guntersville course for the first time.

"All the teams have stepped it up these past few years so there should be some really hard-fought battles this weekend," Kelly said. "The U-12 Graham Trucking is going to fight hard to be on top."

Joining Kelly will be a teammate, rookie Corey Peabody, who will steer the U-98 Graham Trucking. The boat campaigned at Guntersville last year as the U-99.9 Miss Rock, but Rob Graham purchased the craft during the offseason.

"This is a fantastic opportunity for us to race with such great competition," Peabody said. "I keep hearing how great the fans in the south are and our team is looking forward to experiencing the HydroFest weekend and create new fans."

Tom Thompson posted his best season as an Unlimited driver last year when he won four preliminary heats and finished third in the National High Points standings aboard the U-11 J&D's. That season started with a third-place at Guntersville and the Maryland native can't wait to get back to what he considers a "home" race.

"I'm very excited about returning to Guntersville for the first race of the season. It's a special place to me, and it would be even more meaningful to win my first race there," said Thompson, who has family in the area and spent several summers in nearby Boaz. "The southern fans of the H1 Unlimited Hydroplane Racing Series are super excited and welcome us with open arms. The autograph sessions and award presentations were packed last year. We can't wait to get back and spend time with our fans."

Another rookie, Bert Henderson will steer the U-7 Spirit of Detroit at the race. A native of Brockeville, Ontario, Henderson has only raced at Detroit in the series and can't wait to run a full season.

"I am glad that we are finally going to race outside of Michigan. I am super pumped!" Henderson said. "We made lots of off-season changes, acquired some new equipment and we have high expectations for this year."

The sixth boat in the field will be the U-440 Bucket List Racing which saw a promising race at Guntersville last year derailed with a blown propeller. But driver Dustin Echols rebounded to steer the boat into a fourth-place finish nationally and the team is excited to open the season.

"Guntersville is the perfect place for our boat. It likes long race courses and it is a super fast race course with great water conditions," Echols said. "We will show the fans that our off-season hard work is paying off."

The six H1 Unlimited hydroplane race boats begin testing on Friday at 10 a.m. EDT with qualifying beginning at 5 p.m. EDT. Preliminary heat racing take place on Saturday and will continue through Sunday with the Southern Cup final beginning at 5:50 p.m. EDT.

All testing, qualifying and racing will be broadcast live on YouTube, Facebook and Twitter.

Bengals' top draft pick tears labrum

CINCINNATI (AP) — Bengals rookie offensive tackle Jonah Williams is expected to miss the season after surgery for a torn labrum in his left shoulder.

The team said in a statement that Williams is expected to make a full recovery. He was injured at a practice earlier this month.

The Bengals drafted Williams at No. 11 overall in April, looking to upgrade an offensive line that has been a longstanding problem. They also took guard Michael Jordan in the fourth round and drafted center Billy Price in the first round last year. Cordy Glenn, last year's left tackle, is expected to return to his former spot.

"We look forward to Jonah being a major contributor in the future, and know that he won't let this injury deter him from still being an important part of this team," First-year head coach Zac Taylor said in a statement.

Minnesota holds off Fever 78-74

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Odyssey Sims scored 25 points, including two free throws with 29.1 seconds left, and the Minnesota Lynx held off the Indiana Fever 78-74 on Tuesday night despite blowing a 22-point lead.

Minnesota was ahead 43-23 at halftime until Indiana scored 24 of the next 30 points to tie it at 60. Kelsey Mitchell sank a fade-away 3-pointer with 6:07 remaining in the fourth quarter for the Fever's first lead, 63-61, since a 5-4 advantage.

But Indiana did not score again until the 1:58 mark as Minnesota had 10 straight points, capped by Damiris Dantas' 3-pointer, to rebuild its lead to 71-63. The Fever did not get closer than three points the rest of the way.

Napheesa Collier added 16 points and Sylvia Fowles had nine points and 11 rebounds for Minnesota (6-5). Sims also had seven rebounds, seven assists and five steals.

Mitchell scored 17 points and Erica Wheeler added 13 for Indiana (5-7), which would have set a team record for largest comeback with a victory.

The Fever had quite an adventure getting back home after finishing off a three-game road trip in Seattle this weekend.

Suffice to say, Fever veteran Natalie Achonwa didn't expect the trip would involve an 8 ½-hour bus haul.

"Control the controllables. ... outside of that, I'm just along for the ride!" she tweeted, chronicling the travel woes on social media .

Everything looked easy enough: Indiana played Sunday afternoon against the Storm and was set to fly the redeye back to Indiana, connecting in Atlanta. The team had about an hour window to catch the connecting flight.

That normally wouldn't be a problem. But the plane — originally scheduled to take off at 10:30 p.m. Pacific time — was delayed because the flight crew hadn't arrived yet.

And when the team boarded the plane, the pilot announced shortly before wheels up that everyone had to get off because of mechanical issues.

Getting on the new plane provided small consolation. The players were offered blankets, Achonwa said.

By the time the Fever landed in Atlanta on Monday, more trouble: They missed their original connecting flight and, with an 18-member traveling party, couldn't get another plane back to Indiana.

So the team boarded a bus for the long ride from Atlanta to Indianapolis. That, too, had its hiccups as the Fever had to switch drivers midway through because the first operator was going to exceed their allowable hours of driving.

Indiana started its road swing in Atlanta last Wednesday. The last part of the trip, Seattle to Indy, was expected to take 22 hours.

Breakdancing close to Olympic debut

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — Breakdancing moved a step closer to the 2024 Olympics on Tuesday, and now organizers can look to book a street venue in Paris.

Called breaking in Olympic circles, its medal debut was last October at the Buenos Aires Youth Summer Games. The street dance competitions will have 16 athletes in each of the men's and women's medal events in Paris.

IOC members formally endorsed requests from Paris officials in February and their own executive board in March to provisionally add breakdancing to the program, pending a final decision in December 2020.

Paris wants to add four sports to its program, though the other three — skateboarding, sport climbing, and surfing — will make Summer Games debuts in Tokyo next year.

"It's important for us in our concept to put sports out of the stadiums and in the heart of the city," said Tony Estanguet, the Paris 2024 president.

Estanguet said the search for a venue will only start Wednesday now his fellow International Olympic Committee members have added their approval.

Breaking will likely also be attractive to 2028 Los Angeles Olympics organizers. The sports program for L.A. should be agreed in 2021, IOC sports director Kit McConnell said.

Surfing will spread the Paris Olympics out of the capital, potentially in the south-west French city of Biarritz, with sailing races already set for Marseille.

"Paris 2024 will choose a venue offering natural waves, as France boasts a number of well-known surfing spots on its Atlantic coast and in its overseas territories," the organizing committee said in a statement.

French Polynesia, the Caribbean and Indian Ocean could all be proposed, International Surfing Association President Fernando Aguerre noted.

"There's a lot of options. A lot of them seem to be very, very positive," Aguerre said, adding a decision was expected later this year.

All four sports must still prove themselves to Olympic observers, and could yet be removed from the Paris program ahead of final approval by the IOC board.

It is too late to add a replacement should any fall short, Estanguet said.

Vandy rides Rocker to 4-1 win, forces a Game 3 against Michigan

By ERIC OLSON
AP Sports Writer

OMAHA, Neb. n— Kumar Rocker struck out 11 while pitching 6 1/3 innings of three-hit ball, and Vanderbilt got to Michigan's shaky bullpen in a 4-1 win in Game 2 of the College World Series finals Tuesday night.

The Commodores (58-12) forced a winner-take-all Game 3 on Wednesday night at TD Ameritrade Park. Michigan is playing for its first national title since 1962, and Vanderbilt is trying for its first since 2014.

Rocker (12-5) set the tone in another in a line of strong performances. Ten of the 6-foot-4, 255-pound freshman's first 11 pitches were strikes.

Michigan (50-21) failed to score in the opening inning for the first time in its five CWS games and five of the first six batters struck out.

Redshirt freshman Isaiah Paige (4-1), pitching for the first time since June 8 in regionals, drew the start for Michigan and worked four-plus innings.

The problems for the Wolverines started after Paige departed. The Commodores picked up an unearned run in the fifth and then Jack Weisenberger, who relieved Benjamin Keizer with two runners on in the sixth, let in two runs on wild pitches to back-to-back batters.

Philip Clarke's ninth homer, against Angelo Smith, made it 4-0.

Rocker worked around two singles, two walks and two errors through six shutout innings. Jack Blomgren singled against him leading off the seventh and a balk put him on second. Rocker struck out Joe Donovan and then left to an ovation from the fans behind the Vanderbilt dugout.

Ako Thomas greeted Tyler Brown with an RBI single for the Wolverines' only run.

Rocker is 10-1 in his last 11 starts, and he's 4-0 in the NCAA Tournament with a 0.96 ERA, 44 strikeouts, five walks in 28 innings.

Other than Jeff Criswell, a starter until the postseason, Michigan's bullpen hadn't been tested until Tuesday. The Wolverines used only three pitchers in winning their first four CWS games, striking out 33, walking seven and posting a 2.25 ERA through 36 innings.

Michigan lost leadoff man and designated hitter Jordan Nwogu to a pulled left quad in the third inning. He was hurt running to first on a grounder and had to be helped off the field.

Teary-eyed Antetokounmpo wins NBA Most Valuable Player honors

By BETH HARRIS
AP Sports Writer

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — The Milwaukee Bucks fell two games short of the NBA Finals.

They won big at the NBA Awards.

A tearful Giannis Antetokounmpo earned Most Valuable Player honors, Mike Budenholzer won Coach of the Year, and Jon Horst took Executive of the Year on Monday night in Santa Monica.

Antetokounmpo, a 24-year-old forward from Greece, beat out Paul George of Oklahoma City and James Harden of Houston, who won last year.

Antetokounmpo was a resounding winner. He received 941 points and 78 first-place votes in the balloting — 165 points more than Harden.

Harden finished second with 776 points and 23 first-place votes.

"MVP is not about stats and numbers, and obviously James Harden had unbelievable numbers and Paul George also, but obviously it's about winning," Antetokounmpo said backstage. "We created great habits throughout the season and were able to stick by them, and that's why we were able to have a chance in every single game we played and were able to win 60 games."

The show had an international flair, with three international players besides Antetokounmpo winning.

Antetokounmpo averaged 27.7 points and 12.5 rebounds while earning All-NBA first-team honors this season, his sixth with the Bucks. He led the franchise to the best record in the regular season and the Bucks reached the Eastern Conference finals.

Tears rolled down his cheeks as Antetokounmpo thanked his mother Veronica and brothers in the audience at Barker Hanger. He credited his late father for pushing him toward his goals and his teammates and coaching staff for their help.

"We started from nothing as a family," he said, "and we are going to be in every stage that we can be as a family."

Antetokounmpo said backstage that he had vowed to his family he wasn't going to cry.

"When you hear your name up there on the stage and then you realize these years of hard work, what you did in the past, then you start getting emotional," he said.

Budenholzer also got choked up while thanking his family after his second coaching honor. He earned the trophy for the first time with Atlanta in 2015.

He guided the Bucks to a 60-22 record in the regular season in his first year with the franchise, leading them to the Eastern Conference finals, where they lost to eventual NBA champion Toronto.

"What they did on the court this year, including the playoffs, was special," Budenholzer said backstage. "We weren't good enough in the end, but we certainly feel like we have enough talent, we have enough character to be a team that's playing in the finals and winning a championship."

Budenholzer also coached Team Giannis in the All-Star Game last season.

He beat out Denver's Mike Malone and Doc Rivers of the Los Angeles Clippers.

Horst was honored in voting by his fellow NBA executives, while the six biggest awards were determined in voting by a global media panel.

Lou Williams was voted the Sixth Man of the Year for the second season in a row and third time in his career, tying former Los Angeles Clipper guard Jamal Crawford.

The guard won for the first time in 2015 with Toronto.

Williams beat out teammate Montrezl Harrell, with whom he formed the highest-scoring bench duo in NBA history last season, and Domantas Sabonis of Indiana.

Williams became the career leader in points off the bench during the season.

"This one was different because I kind of went into the season wanting this one. In years past I always just played and lived with whatever happened," he said. "I felt like this one was going to be a legacy piece."

Rudy Gobert of the Utah Jazz won Defensive Player of the Year for the second straight season.

The 26-year-old center from France beat out Antetokounmpo and George.

"I never thought I would be able to do that when I started basketball playing in France," Gobert said backstage. "I didn't know an NBA player, I didn't know nothing about basketball. I was just having fun."

Pascal Siakam of the NBA champion Toronto Raptors earned Most Improved Player.

The 25-year-old from Cameroon averaged 16.9 points and started 79 of 80 regular-season games for the Raptors in his third year with the team.

Siakam had 26 20-point outings after scoring 20 points in a game only once in his first two seasons. He then scored 32 points in Game 1 of the NBA Finals.

Siakam beat out De'Aaron Fox of Sacramento and D'Angelo Russell of Brooklyn.

Luka Doncic of the Dallas Mavericks easily won Rookie of the Year.

The 20-year-old small forward from Slovenia accepted his trophy from RJ Barrett, who went to the New York Knicks as the No. 3 pick in the NBA draft last week.

Doncic was the No. 3 pick last year.

The other finalists were Deandre Ayton of Phoenix and Trae Young of Atlanta.

Larry Bird and Magic Johnson shared the Lifetime Achievement Award.

The former rivals took turns holding their trophies while each other spoke.

Bird said the NBA is in good hands with today's talented athletes and he urged them to keep the game the same so it continues on for future generations.

Johnson starred for the Los Angeles Lakers and Bird with the Boston Celtics.

Mike Conley Jr., newly traded to the Utah Jazz, claimed trophies for Teammate and Sportsmanship of the Year.

Conley earned the awards for his 12-year tenure with the Memphis Grizzlies.

Bradley Beal of the Washington Wizards received the NBA Cares Community Assist honor.

The Americans could also face No. 3 England if they go through to the semifinals.

"I think this game was extremely important to us, looking forward to France," Morgan said. "It was a very challenging game and it showed a little bit of what we might see in France, so this was an important stepping stone for us looking forward."

France also got a tough test out of the way.

Les Bleues finished atop their group with three wins before surviving their knockout opener. Captain Amandine Henry redirected Amel Majri's free kick for a tiebreaking goal in the 107th minute of a 2-1 victory Sunday night in Le Havre. Valérie Gauvin, whose first-half goal was disallowed in a video review, put France ahead early in the second but Thaisa tied the score 11 minutes later for No. 10 Brazil.

Afterward, French coach Corinne Diacre was critical of her team, saying, "We weren't at our best."

"Obviously, I know my players inside out. I know that we weren't 100 percent today and the objective is to hit that 100 percent for the next game," Diacre said through a translator. "Will this happen? I don't know. I don't have a magic wand. I don't have a crystal ball. I can't see into the future. But it's something that we're working on."

The Americans have played the French 23 times, with France winning just three. But one of those was a friendly in January, when Kadidiatou Diani — who wasn't named to France's World Cup roster — scored twice in a 3-1 victory.

The match Friday, while great for the sport, also means one of the favorites will be headed home on Saturday. A lopsided draw put three of the world's top teams on one side of the bracket, while No. 2 Germany tops the other.

The Germans, two-time World Cup winners, won their knockout round opener 3-0 against No. 38 Nigeria, setting up a quarterfinal Saturday against No. 9 Sweden in Rennes. The Swedes knocked Canada out of the tournament with a 1-0 victory on Monday night.

U.S. coach Jill Ellis acknowledged the final-in-the-quarterfinals feel to Friday's match.

"I truly believe this is the world game for women, and so what a showcase piece. I'm sure a lot of people would like it later in the tournament, but it is what it is," Ellis said. "Myself and probably Corinne are both like, 'We've got good players, good teams and good setups, so let's go for it.'"

TORA

Tora is a 1- to 3-year-old female mixed-breed dog. She is a medium-sized, funny and loving girl. Tora is always ready to play and is not picky about what she plays with. If you throw her a toy, she will bring it right back to you. Tora knows how to sit and rarely barks. Once playtime is over, she likes to cuddle. She also loves kids and does well with other dogs. Tora is spayed and up to date on her vaccinations, which makes her $55 total to adopt.

PETS OF THE WEEK

The Madison-Jefferson County Animal Shelter currently has 10 dogs or puppies, and 22 cats or kittens available. Pictures of additional pets waiting for adoption can be viewed at www.sisaveapet.com

Normal shelter hours are Monday, Thursday and Friday from noon to 5 p.m., Wednesday from 1 p.m. to 7 p.m., Saturday from noon to 4 p.m., and Sunday from noon to 3 p.m. It is closed Tuesday. The shelter number is (812) 273-1788 and the email is animal.shelter39@jefferson-county.in.gov

All cats and kittens are $45 off unless they are already spayed or neutered. Discount is courtesy of the Animal Shelter and the Jefferson County Humane Society.

Volunteers are always welcome at the shelter. Individuals must be at least 16 years old to volunteer. Volunteers can help with everyday cleaning, answering phones, and exercising the pets. Contact the shelter for details.

The shelter is a registered organization with the Kroger Community Rewards program. To support the shelter, register a Kroger card at www.krogercommunityrewards.com and enter FL919.

Support the shelter while walking your dog. Use the "Walk for a Dog" or "Woof-Trax" app available through the App Store or Google Play. For each mile walked, a donation is made to the shelter.

A list of needed items can be found on the shelter website. Donations can be mailed to 2727 Hannah Drive, Madison 47250 or dropped off during shelter hours. The shelter also accepts aluminum and steel cans, which are recycled and the proceeds put toward the medical fund. Recent donations have helped get treatment for a beagle with a skin infection and a cat with wounds. The shelter asks that aluminum and steel donations be separated. Steel cans should also be rinsed before they are dropped off. Cans can be dropped off at anytime in a bin located on the east side of the shelter.

Those with missing pets can stop by the shelter, call or email a complete description of the pet, when and where it was last seen, the owner's name and contact information, and a picture of the pet. Pets are held for three days before they are made available for adoption.

Animals should not be abandoned outside of the shelter or dropped off at the shelter after hours.

For animal control issues in Madison, call (812) 265-3347. For animal control issues in Hanover and Jefferson County, call (812) 265-2648.

LUCY

Lucy is a 2-year-old female terrier mix. She is a very playful gal who is timid indoors in the shelter kennel. Once you take her out of the kennel environment, Lucy will show her true colors. A nice lady helped Lucy out of a rough situation and got her to the shelter so she could find a better home. Lucy does well with most dogs, but make sure to bring your dog to meet her just in case. Lucy likes to alert when strangers come near, but her bark comes with no bite. Lucy is up to date on her vaccinations, which makes her $55 total to adopt.

BRIDGE

THE QUESTION CAME FROM THIS DEAL

Arthur C. Clarke, an English science fiction writer who lived in Ceylon (now Sri Lanka) from 1956 until his death in 2008, said, "I don't pretend we have all the answers. But the questions are certainly worth thinking about."

Yesterday, I mentioned that a friend asked me when I count out a deal; do I start immediately or wait until it is necessary? I answered at trick one. The question came after this deal.

East might have opened three clubs, but wanted a seven-card suit at unfavorable vulnerability. After North balanced with a takeout double, I advanced with two spades because I was willing to compete with three hearts on the next round. North might well have rebid with a four-club splinter bid, which would have given us a shot at reaching six spades.

Obviously, four spades was easy, so I imagined we were in slam, where I needed to find the heart queen.

I took the first trick on the board, drew trumps and led dummy's club. East rose with his ace and played the club queen. I ruffed on the board, cashed the diamond ace, ruffed a diamond (East unwisely discarded a heart) and ruffed a club. What had I learned?

I knew West had started with two spades, six diamonds and at least three clubs. So, East was longer in hearts than West. But from East's heart discard, I had a strong feeling that West had the heart queen. So, I played a heart to my ace and led another heart, claiming 12 tricks when the queen did appear.

Keep counting.

Techy toilet troubles

Annie Lane

Dear Readers: A recent column talked about someone being grossed out when entering a bathroom stall because the previous occupant failed to flush. I was pretty hard on that previous occupant, assuming they were at fault. Quite a few readers pointed out that this might have been a problem of technology and not inconsideration. Here are two of the letters that I really enjoyed reading:

Dear Annie: In your May 18 column, "Dismayed in North Carolina" was confronted with an unflushed toilet when entering a stall. Yes, the previous user should have checked, but as one who travels and dines out frequently, I long ago chocked this up to the proliferation of toilets and urinals that flush automatically.

It is rare to encounter a restroom that does not have them, so it's possible the previous user, the one who "Dismayed" followed, had assumed his toilet would flush automatically when he left and did not bother to check. These automatic flushers have been a blessing, as the situation "Dismayed" encountered had been happening with increasing frequency before their introduction. — A Fan of Automatics

Dear Annie: I just read the letter from "Dismayed in North Carolina" and feel that I have to point out another side of the equation: The gentleman in question may not have been just "disgustingly lazy," but rather didn't realize it had not flushed. I might sometimes be guilty of the same offense and not aware of it. We live in a highly automated world. Toilets don't always come with handles anymore. All the plumbing fixtures in my workplace and most of the public places I "visit" are automated.

I have become so used to the toilets flushing themselves. Sometimes the toilet is automated but still doesn't flush itself, so I have to do it. And it can be difficult to find the button to push to manually flush. Very often they hide it somewhere on the side of the electronics.

I laugh when I stand in front of the sink and hold out my hands to wash them, waiting for the faucet to turn itself on automatically, and then realize that the plumbing is not automated, so I turn on the faucets by hand. I place my hands under the paper towel dispenser and wait for it to spit out a length of paper and nothing comes out because I did not pull on the exposed piece or press the dispensing button or handle.

Yes, there may be times when someone is just lazy, but it may also be that we are so conditioned by automation that we do not realize our business is still in the bowl when we exit the stall. — Too Conditioned by Automation

Dear Automation Fans and Subjects: You make good points, but there still is no excuse for leaving the stall until the toilet has flushed. If it is automated and won't flush, there should be a handle or button to flush manually. If there isn't one, then that company should be called out and forced by public pressure to offer a manual alternative.
